

---

Brexit and Data Protection: The UK Government's New Data Protection Bill

11. OKTOBER 2017

The UK government has taken an additional step in its attempts to find a way to ensure uninterrupted data flows between the UK and the EU after Brexit. On 13 September 2017, the UK government introduced a draft Data Protection Bill to the UK Parliament. The very complex Bill, with its 18 schedules and numerous cross-references to the GDPR, is designed to enter into force on 25 May 2018, i.e., when the new EU General Data Protection Regulation becomes effective.

Read what the authors think you should know at this stage.