This year's conference is shaping up to be potentially very impactful in the world of sanctions compliance and enforcement both here in the US and overseas. The Trump Administration is assessing its position regarding sanctions policy for Iran, Cuba, Syria, Russia and other hot spots; as well as grappling with new authorizations on Iran, a rapidly changing landscape with respect to Russia, cautious interest surrounding opportunities in Cuba and questions over many other OFAC programs such as Cyber Sanctions, now has never been a more crucial time to attend what has become North America's leading conference for the economic sanctions and international trade community.

WilmerHale Partner Ronald Meltzer will be a featured speaker during the panel discussion

"The Critical Elements that Should be Part of Every Comprehensive Sanctions Compliance and Screening Program."
