OCTOBER 18-19, 2011

The credit crisis has led to the most extensive overhaul of financial regulation since the early 20th century. The reform legislation establishes a comprehensive framework for the regulation of over-the-counter derivatives and the market participants who transact in these products. This program will provide a comprehensive overview of the new regulatory framework for over-the-counter derivatives and derivatives market participants, and explain how the new regulatory framework will affect these products, the structure of the market for these products and market participants.
