

Dow Jones Webinar: Fundraising In-Depth: The Key Terms and Questions LPs & GPs Must Know

2007-11-09

With U.S. private equity firms raising $137 billion during the first half of 2007, it's clear that LP interest in fund offerings remains firm. But in a crowded field of firms seeking capital—more than 200—it is important that you have terms that won't alienate would-be investors.

To help you pinpoint exactly what you should and should not pushing on LPs during the fundraising process, Private Equity Analyst is convening a panel of legal experts for an intensive 90-minute virtual seminar. This event will go beyond the usual explanation on terms and provide an opportunity to ask the questions that have come up or may be poised to come up while raising capital for that new fund.

Our experts will walk you through everything that should—and should not—be in your partnership term sheet, including the latest research on which terms and conditions can strengthen your negotiating position as well as how you should be dealing with hot-button issues like corporate governance.
