International Bar Association: Managing Complex Litigation: The View from Inside the Corporation

APRIL 14-16, 2010

Presented by the International Bar Association, this conference will bring together in-house and external counsel for an opportunity to learn about the latest approaches to managing complex litigation that are being used by leading in-house lawyers and the outside counsel they select for their most important cases. Topics to be discussed include: how inside counsel choose outside counsel for their toughest assignments; a provocative look at the root causes of corporate disputes and how they can be avoided; the many challenges inside counsel face in managing complex litigation, including how they approach staffing, working with outside counsel, internal reporting, electronic evidence gathering, privilege issues and more; the latest developments in litigation budgeting and alternative fee arrangements; and how inside counsel work with governments and manage issues posed by parallel judicial and regulatory proceedings in multi-national disputes.
