

Practising Law Institute: How to Prepare an Initial Public Offering 2013

APRIL 10, 2013

Understanding the IPO process is an essential skill for both legal and business advisors. With the improvement in the markets, IPOs are happening with increasing frequency. In addition, last April Congress enacted IPO “on ramp” provisions in the JOBS Act that made becoming a public company even easier for “emerging growth companies,” which represent almost 90% of the IPO market. If you have not worked on an IPO recently, now is the time to refresh and hone your skills and learn about changes in market practice as a result of the JOBS Act.

An experienced panel, including securities lawyers and litigators, an underwriter and a member of the SEC, will look at the offering from the perspective of his or her respective discipline as together they guide you through the initial public offering process.

WilmerHale Partner Lisa Firenze will be a featured speaker.
