

Society For Risk Analysis: Past, Present and Future of Risk Analysis

2005-12-05

This Annual Meeting for the Society For Risk Analysis brought together scientists and practitioners trained in multiple disciplines from around the world, and employed in all sectors, such as government, industry, consulting firms, NGOs and academic institutions, to reflect on the past of risk analysis and to focus on its future. Attendees had the opportunity to hear from leaders and industry representatives on a wide variety of topics related to risk analysis.

WilmerHale counsel James Votaw was a featured speaker at this event. He spoke on the topic of “Nanoscale Materials – In Search of a Consistent International Regulatory Approach.”
