

Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry: International Conference on Nanotechnology for the Forest Products Industry

2009-06-24

This conference, presented by TAPPI, brought together input from leading researchers, industry experts, government representatives and other stakeholders to offer a multi-disciplinary look at the rewards and risks of using nanotechnology. Attendees had the opportunity to hear from experts in agriculture, safety, policy and other related interests and gain a global, technical and social perspective on how nanotechnology will influence the forest products industry and other industries.

WilmerHale counsel James Votaw was a featured speaker at this event. He spoke on the panel titled "A Legal Perspective on the Environmental, Health & Safety Aspects of Nanomaterials: Navigating the Uncertainties."
