

The Capital Network: Prepare Your Company for Due Diligence

BOSTON, MA

Would your company survive due diligence? If you make it past the first meeting with an angel, you have to get through an intense due diligence process before you will ever see a check. Investors will dig deep behind the scenes of your company and give a critical look at the day-to-day operations in your company. There are many things you can do from the very beginning to set up your company properly, so that it runs smoothly while you are building a successful product.
