

West LegalEdcenter: A Look Into the Financial Stability Plan

2009-02-25

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner recently announced a new plan to restore confidence in America's financial institutions and correct the inadequacies of the Troubled Asset Relief Program. Geithner's plan was light on specifics, but among the details known are that the government plans to implement a "stress test" for banks, establish a Public-Private Investment Fund, and create a trillion-dollar Consumer and Business Lending Initiative. At this program, presented by West LegalEdcenter, a panel of banking and finance experts will take a close look at what has been proposed and offer their keen insight.

WilmerHale partner Russell J. Bruemmer will be a featured speaker at this program.
