

World Justice Project Conference: Multi-disciplinary Conference on the Rule of Law

2008-06-11

This conference, presented by the World Justice project, will bring together leaders in the community from a broad range of disciplines, including architecture, business, education, engineering, environment, finance, government, health, human rights, labor, media, military, public safety and religion. It will examine what defines the Rule of Law, and how and why it underpins the work all of us do and creates the basis for working together in the future.

Ambassador Charlene Barshefsky, a WilmerHale partner, will be a moderator at this conference on a panel entitled, "Intellectual Property and the Rule of Law: China as a Case Study."
