
Hale and Dorr Receives "Outstanding Web Site Award" for Corporate Web Site Excellence

2002-10-03

Hale and Dorr's web site received an "Outstanding Web Site Award" in the 2002 WebAward Competition sponsored by the Web Marketing Association.

Since 1997, the Web Awards have recognized web professionals for their outstanding work.

Web Marketing Association (WMA), an independent organization, which evaluates and judges corporate sites on the World Wide Web, gives the awards. Over 800 sites were entered from around the world and judged during this year's competition. The entries were judged based on design, innovation, content, interactivity, navigation, ease of use, and use of technology. The Hale and Dorr site was praised for its exceptional design, content and ease of use.

"Our web site reflects the high level of service and quality that our clients receive from Hale and Dorr," said Silvia Coulter, director of marketing and business development, Hale and Dorr.

"This award is a true testament to our commitment to client service and the hard work of the Hale and Dorr interactive, design and marketing teams."

Previous winners of this prestigious worldwide award include General Motors, CNET

News.com, Deloitte Consulting and E! Online.
