
Seth Waxman Awarded Frederick Douglass Human Rights Award

2005-11-03

The Southern Center for Human Rights awarded Seth Waxman the Frederick Douglass Human Rights Award on November 3rd, 2005. The award was given to Seth “for contributing his eloquence and extraordinary skills throughout his career to the pursuit of justice and his many accomplishments, including bringing about the end of the death penalty for children.”

For more information about the Southern Center for Human Rights click here.