
Technology

Critical industry insight and formidable strength across key practices.

Disruptive competitors, shifting regulatory climates, technological breakthroughs, new distribution channels and intellectual property challenges are just some of the issues technology companies routinely face. Our lawyers understand the legal, business and policy issues affecting our technology clients, and we are proud to have been recognized by Law360 as “Technology Group of the Year” for three consecutive years. We represent a range of clients, from startups to industry leaders, in the internet, software, computer and hardware services, and mobile and telecommunications sectors, and offer these clients multidisciplinary solutions to their most critical legal and business challenges.

In order to achieve outstanding results, our lawyers bring to bear technology industry insights combined with a collaborative approach across a wide range of practices, from licensing, venture financing and securities regulation to intellectual property litigation, trade secret protection and government investigations. Our multidisciplinary teams also work in some of the fastest-growing verticals in the industry, including artificial intelligence, cloud computing, Internet of Things, cryptocurrency and FinTech. This combination of exceptional legal skills, industry knowledge and exposure to cutting-edge issues positions our lawyers to help clients navigate complex matters that are critical to their success.
